

Dismal Euphony

"In Remembrance Of A Shroud"

We who run from the presence of the sun
By the voided bitter gleam chasing darkness like a dream
All with weary tasks fordone
'scape the serpents tounge
To catch the shadow, let the substance fall Like the sun's bright beam entagled in melancholy Entagled in the black roars of an image's stream

Put the wretch that lies in woe
in remembrance of a shroud
The match agreed with flames admired
Now I find hideousness in mind Shall I disturb this hallowed house?
I have been sent with dusk before to sweep the dust behind the door
