You're a diamond that I'm afraid to touch, You're damn near flawless and I'm sure you'd cut on my eyes, my hands, my head, my heart You'd tear this canvas skin apart Oh what a waste of human art that be.

You're a dungeon but you're made of glass Your prisoners have no idea they're trapped
'cause you look so beautiful inside
It makes us feel like we're alive
But Lord knows we'll never survive your walls

But didn't you know that all along
You didn't need to hear your song
And if you don't know that then you might as well be dead

Medusa's child preserved her former looks She kept her out of all the story books
Just to get back at all of the men who had tried time and time again to claim the right of her demise and end

A million years go by and you're still around You're knocking us off of our feet, you're knocking us down
But we still can't leave you alone, the way you move on would be prone to want to be turned into stone by you

But didn't you know that all along
You didn't need to hear your song
And if you don't know that

You make me feel so alive
But it's consequence of being dead Was it how you arrived? I can't tell Or was it in the way you left us here

(boo boo doo doo)

But didn't you know that all along
You didn't need to hear your song
And if you don't know that then you might as well-- might as well oh

You didn't need to hear your song
'cause you just knew it all along But you didn't know that so you might as well-- oh might as well be dead
