(Bobby Russell)

You say you're tired of her and you found a faster life You're having trouble going home to her when you get out of work at night
You say you're dining out with friends won't be in till late While she sits home with the children you fathered and tolerate.

Now wasn't that the same little gal you swore a while back You'd spend your whole life through Shortly after that didn't she hang it up for life to marry
you Hey, are you afraid that the boys at the office will no longer call you stud Well, secretary's an alligator shoes got in your blood.

Better mind your better homes and gardens and take the kids out too
And take her home some candy and say baby I love
you
Now I'm not saying that she'll forgive or even make amends
But you're bout half smart and you better start and that might just get ya back in.

Have you heard that that door swings both ways my friend she can be just as gone
The best deal you ever had you ever had you ever had is waitin' right there at home You say you're gettin' caught up early you're cheated out of life Well, you also said that you'd be a millionaire but the time you're twenty-five.

Don't make it better mind your better homes and gardens take the kids to the Zoo Spend the day with the PTA she might think that's cool No, I'm not saying that she'll forgive and let you right back in her world

She ain't gonna flip but you've got it licked if she smiles 'cause she's a good ole girl.

Better mind your better homes and gardens take the kids out too
And take her home some flowers and say baby I love you...
