(Dolly Parton)

John Daniel came to town one summer afternoon Wearin' dirty work clothes so everyone presumed
He was just another logger from the loggin' camp
nearby
And he was, but there was somethin' different in John Daniel's eyes

John Daniel was a young man, not more than twenty-four
And there was an air about him that one could not ignore
And in spite of callused hands & dirty clothes, his face was kind
And I wanted so to know what was in John Daniel's mind

John Daniel, tell me where did you come from; tell me where is it you've been John Daniel, tell me why are you different from all of these other men
John Daniel, there's somethin' about you that I don't quite understand
John Daniel, do you hold the answer to a higher plan?

I rented him a room; he went upstairs like all the rest
It was Saturday and he'd be goin' in to town, I guessed But he left in a robe and sandals, with a Bible in his hand;
And I thought to myself, John Daniel, I don't understand

Now I'd planned to meet some friends of mine when I got off at three,
In the park we often gather to talk of love and peace
When I got there I found that a crowd had gathered 'round;
And there I saw John Daniel a sittin' on the ground

John Daniel, tell me where did you come from; tell me
where is it you've been John Daniel, tell me why are you different from all of
these other men

quite understand
John Daniel, do you hold the answer to a higher plan?

So, "You want to be free," he said, "Well, this is how you can."

As he read from the Bible he held in his hand We were searchin' for the truth not knowin' where to look,
Not knowin' that the answers all were in John Daniel's book

John Daniel told us all how we could be free John Daniel taught us all a better way for you and me
He came to us in our own way so we'd be sure to see
He had the light and essence of the man from Galilee

John Daniel, tell me where did you come from; tell me
where is it you've been John Daniel, tell me why are you different from all of
these other men
John Daniel, there's something about you that I don't
quite understand
John Daniel, do you hold the answer to a higher plan?

John Daniel, John Daniel, John Daniel
John Daniel do you hold the answer to a higher plan?
John Daniel came to town one summer afternoon
Wearin' dirty work clothes so everyone presumed
He was just another logger from the loggin' camp
nearby
And he was, but there was somethin' different in John
Daniel's eyes
Ooh, John Daniel, tell me where did you come from Tell me where is it you've been John Daniel, tell me why are you different from all of
these other men
John Daniel, there's something about you that I don't
quite understand
John Daniel, do you hold the answer to a higher plan?
