"The Voyage"

I brace myself but to no avail, numbness crept over me, overpowering Oppression deepening Every muscle paralysed Laying under a veil of righteousness, finally everything became blank
Projecting my spirit from within, leaving the body behind

Gazing down at my face, pale and as still as death
The flowers withered and life wept, but my body remained sleepless

The blinding light reveals your purity, this voyage here seems so tangible

I will hear them, I will hear the songs that were played from the birth of The first
Foolish embrace of a false esteem, the wind will turn Call, I keep calling... Same hostility lies In the depths of all our existence Encapture time to find the other side, but it's all the same

And like the word your life unfolds, upon the tears for which you burn
Come seek the life from which you hide Let go the guilt that dwells within, from which the torch was lit in sin
Come walk the road to find your true paradise

Spread forth your wings and fly away...
