Mama says not to love him, the way I do
She tells me to forget him and find someone new
All of my friends tell me that I'm making a mistake
But how can they know
How can they know

They say I should marry a rich boy who's handsome and tall
It doesn't seem to matter to them, whether I love him at all
They don't even know him
Yet they're wrong
So how can they know
How can they know

I know they want the best for me, but there's not me
If I make a mistake about love, I'll pay the penalty
If they get to know him, the way I do
They'll see he's got a loving heart
They'll love him too
Oh why won't they except him
Why can't they be fair
How can they know
How can they know
How can they know
How can they know
