We of blood frozen, so thick it cannot thaw
Joints lubricated by sweet alcohol
Liver dissolving, eyelids but heavy sheets
Ignorant bliss and the bloodshot secrets it will keep

Pills if you wouldn't mind
Clouds of vapor to stretch out the miles
Hung over we'll greet a certain death
With flash of chipped tooth smile

Each cities secrets buried beneath
In this campaign of vice, drinking song's a reprise
A slow blur existence, wading knee deep in sin
Clutch at the ulcer, acknowledge the frailty within

At dawn we begin again

You who have never seen your breath
Only you're alive
When the mitten clenches in a fist
Then I'll kiss this fucking world goodnight

Destroyer, my only keeper
I kneel unto your Amber gates
Pray you'll kill the ugliness
That sleep won't take away

Free drinks, they shall not kill us
They only warm our fucking bones
But late at night, I can't forget your laugh
And everything I used to know

But I've never seen so many faces
And I've never felt this all alone
Well, I guess this is what I've always wanted
A four-wheeled coffin to call home

I will not ask another name
Disappearing faster than they came
Are you having fun?
Are you entertained?

Another heart-shaped bruise
Another friend back home I'll lose
Am I missing something?
What is left to prove?

Another heated first name fuck
Another stroke of dead man's luck
Another year I can't replace
Another tear sent down her face

At dawn we begin again
Tune of death shall bring an end

You who have never seen your breath
Only you're alive
When this mitten clenches in a fist
I'll kiss this fucking Hell goodnight

Destroyer, my only keeper
I kneel unto your Amber gates
Pray you'll kill the ugliness
That sleep won't take away
