Teeth to cold porcelain
Spit out, beautiful grin
Kiss your mother with that mouth
And deliver me from sin

Sad smile, crumbling wills
Dry shores, struggling gills
Bare feet bleeding on rocks
This is your last shot, sugar

Hold your hand in the fire and wait for another reminder
Swimming in shit we forget what it felt like to live
Whose fault is it?

Bloodshot, this is the drug
Of our principle lust
Walk out, don't look around for the angel
She left years ago

Running notes between foes
Needle tracing her clothes
Prop your face on the stove
And hush your pretty mouth

We're all alone here tonight
Don't look over your shoulder
Everything is alright
No need for worries or fright
Don't look over your shoulder
I promise on my life that
No one will be watching

Wake up
There's nothing to gain
Within a lifetime of brevity
Eyes of the enemy
Fixating your face

Break down
Your hands are restrained
Rub raw the flesh of the innocent scrubbing at this deep stain

Dead wings, stapled to back
Heart strings, ripped into half
Baby, don't make me laugh
The jokes been on you all along

Bruised lip, sting of the swell
My dreams, thrown down the well
This may hurt you like hell
But darling, you wear red so well

I promise on my life
This time there will be no witnesses
