Strange how things can change.
How your consciousness can fade.
Reason can't compete with the drug that shares your name.
And there you are on cue when the light falls.
Waving at strangers, wearing your name out.

You are not yourself here, you are someone else dear.
Aren't you terrific?
Aren't you terrific now?

All the world applauds to the popular tricks you choose.
Who are they to stop, when your hands are clapping too?
And you believe that it's an achievement.
Scratching them where they have no feeling.

You are not yourself here, you are someone else dear.
Aren't you terrific?
Aren't you terrific now?

It was you.
Who spoke out when no one heard.
Oh, yeah.

You're not as pure as you were, vanity hangs you by threads.
And right now I wish some things were undone.
It's as natural as it is fun.
This is not the time to give up yourself to anyone.

You are not yourself here, you are someone else dear.
Aren't you terrific?
Aren't you terrific?

If you saw yourself dear, you would be amazed dear.
Aren't you terrific?
Finally terrific now?
