reach out, nothing's there i can't see black out, get's so cold i can't breathe who's there, sweating though i'm freezing i'm scared, i'm venting releasing rewind, just enough to know what's behind, does anybody know trust in fact, has anybody seen me look back, your life is but a daydream satellites' receiving

are all my loved ones grieving and does it matter at all

if i was brave enough to fall i'd find the answers now my back's against the wall
forever
big world and i am feeling small the slow are faster and i know i don't have it all together

today everybody's slackin' within i wish that i was back in high school where everything's easy no cares just childhood teasing in fact now it gets depressing relax everything is stressing i don't know if i can take this but i'm somehow gonna make it through

i'd find the answers
big world and i am feeling small

together

(bridge-demo version)

what you see is what you get must i remind this every second of my life to everyone who can't seem to mind their own

i'd find the answers
together
