I saw myself in your eyes
False words on my lips
And your cloud coloured eyes, they will be my demise as I
Let the untruths slip
And you're saying 'Do you know who loves you?'
And I say 'I just couldn't guess'
Then you say that you do and I say 'I love you too'
When we both just couldn't mean it less
Happiness dies in the sunniest skies, and once dead it should be free
With a harvest of sighs
And your beautiful lies
You know that love dies
Under lock and key
And behind the smile,
I've seen for a while
Your love fading, quietly
And my heart it is bare
Of the love that was there
We're just too afraid to see
We're afraid to see where we know we must be
Time to let love die
And my heart's filled with doom
And my memories of you
And your cloud covered eyes
Happiness dies in the sunniest skies, and once dead it
should be free
With a harvest of sighs
And your beautiful lies
You know that love dies
Under lock and key
