

Earth And Fire "Seasons"

Visit "Seasons" on MotoLyrics.com

There were times before the skies were blue
Before the sun could burn the dew
Times without years and seasons
But then when the seasons were there, all kinds of vibrations in the air
The sky was blue and no scar on the velvet skin
Winter, hoar-frost on the trees
I think I'll stay asleep for another week
Summer, I can't protect myself from the heat
I think I'll find myself a shady seat

There were times before the day was born
Before the rain could drown the lawn
Times without years and seasons
But then when the seasons were there, all kinds of
vibrations in the air
The rain was wet, transparent like glass Autumn, sparrows in the sky while the leaves on the branches are drying
Spring, sound of a newborn life
I think I'm moving on 'cause it's time

There were times before the skies were blue
Before the sun could burn the dew
Times without years and times without seasons
There were times before the skies were blue
Before the sun could burn the dew
Times without years and times without seasons

Visit Earth And Fire page on MotoLyrics.com, to get more lyrics and videos.