

Eddie Always Wins "Stranded In San Francisco"

Visit "Stranded In San Francisco" on MotoLyrics.com

She wakes at 6 am, and she is all alone.
No one by her side, no one on the phone,
She's missin' home right now, it's starting to show.
She starts to cry as her tears hit the icy snow.

She doesn't know how she got stranded in San Francisco,
She's so lost and all on her own,
She's all alone with a tank of gas, where the hell does
this go,
Now she just wants to go home.

She starts wondering, why did this happen to me?
What did I ever do to you, when did we disagree,
It's so cold out here, there's no one to talk to.
I miss everything, I shouldn't have thought of you.

She doesn't know how she got stranded in San Francisco,
She's so lost and all on her own,
She's all alone with a tank of gas, where the hell does
this go,
Now she just wants to go home.

She's had enough of this, it's really time to go,
No fun times for her, nothing she can show,
She about to break down, now it's half past 9,
She losing herself, and she's running out of time.

She doesn't know how she got stranded in San Francisco,
She's so lost and all on her own,
She's all alone with a tank of gas, where the hell does
this go,
Now she just wants to go home.

What's happening to her? I guess she's stuck here,
What's goin' on with her? Run out of luck here,
Who's gonna come find her... in lonely San Francisco?

