

Edenbridge "The Canterville Ghost"

Visit "The Canterville Ghost" on MotoLyrics.com

Time stands still in Canterville
For ages this curse lays upon
Pass the night walking for four hundred years
Longing for this liaison

The barren almond once shed the leaves
The splendor has crumbled away
This harm was done and the green-eyed one
Once it had led him astray

Here in the absence of light
Let a willing ear roam
And far into the night
A ray of hope will lead you home

So will you stand beside
Among those evil-eyed?
Voices will whisper into your ear
So believe you're immune

So will you beg and pray?
To leave this endless gray
Once of his age he was boast
The Canterville ghost

Bathing in tears and swim in delight
Yearning for feelings long gone
One sorry sight, one fly by night
As this girl in her prime came on

But love will be stronger than life and death
When cupid's dart has hidden you
As if by magic the almond will bloom
The beginning of something new

Here in the absence of light
Let a willing ear roam
And far into the night
A ray of hope will lead you home

So will you stand beside
Among those evil-eyed?

Voices will whisper into your ear
So believe you're immune

So will you beg and pray?
To leave this endless gray
Once of his age he was boast
The Canterville ghost

Tears for my sins
I have no more
Now pray for me
I know what for

Angel will you
Have mercy now?
And the house
Shall be still

So will you stand beside
Among those evil-eyed?
Voices will whisper into your ear
So believe you're immune

So will you beg and pray?
To leave this endless gray
Once of his age he was boast
The Canterville ghost

Visit Edenbridge page on MotoLyrics.com, to get more lyrics and videos.