She put on her party dress, I put on my jacket
We walked out the door, didn't have nowhere to go
Didn't matter that the night was getting cold
Pulled her close up to me to keep her warm

And everything was beautiful and free in the beginning

She woke up late in the morning, I pulled the curtain back
The sun came pouring in, wasn't no one in the world
Wasn't nothing else, just me and my girl
She put her arms around me, gave me a kiss

And everything was beautiful and free in the beginning
