Alice in a teacup, storms have been replaced
All for one forgotten in an empty space
Kiss the dog good evening, put the sun to sleep
Check the doors are locked

Now, would you marry me?
Would you marry me?

There's a ballerina dancing on my porch
Fireflies are lighting up a natural torch
Promises forgotten, ma will never know
All the things she taught me now begin to show

Would you marry me?
Would you marry me?

Save some time to wonder, leave me here to think
Lead a horse to water and then make him drink
Would you marry me?
Would you marry me?
