Is opening a window one way out? No I should stay
I have climbed these stairs one thousand times but yet
I slide straight beack down to find

Feelings are falling free, imaginations dance
Push it to the ilmit, keep reminding
Holding on to all I have as is seems to fall
Jus tilke sand falls through the hourglass

And in the dark, when no one is around
I sit and stafre at the silhouettes of me
And I say, my oh my, what a journey
We have come along this far
Can there be a better place for me to see?

Is opening a window one way out? No I should stay
I have climbed these stairs one thousand times but yet
I slide straight beack down to find
With questions comes a choice to bring
A path to better things,
Though a love induces sleep of reason
But there's still a building voice of this inner man
That can hardly be hid by these eyes

And in the dark, when no one is around
I sit and stafre at the silhouettes of me
And I say, my oh my, what a journey
We have come along this far
Can there be a better place for me to see?
