"Where Eye Meets Eye"

One glimpse of You and I shrink
The hand of shame squeezes my stomach
One glimpse of You and I know it's not in your nature to You don't really know me I allowed myself to think turn Your back

And I want to give You more than I have got So tiny I'm almost disappearing in this world
You're holding in Your hand

This is my heart resting in the palm of my hand
Still You know my name
I feel you but don't understand
Holding it up to the sky for you to see
This is more than I've planned from the start was it the ceiling
The second You stepped through the door or
I want my heart to break
I stood and behold Your beauty
This worn-out skin is peeling
I will never again praise You because of duty for the things that make Your heart break
