Across my arm is that old ink stain
God I wish I could erase that name
Reminds me that I'm the one to blame

I used to think the rules were made for breaking
Now I question every road I've taken
And I regret every heart I've forsaken
Here's my confession:

The mistakes I've made are comin' back to haunt me
Like a ghost from a grave always there to taunt me
You say it's okay, you say you still want me
But you don't know where I've been
I'm no stranger to myself
I've got skeletons, I've got skeletons

You tell me how a man can be forgiven
Start clean on the life he's living
How do you run from a demon?

I've tried every single thing I know
They just won't let me go
I'm tired of walking down the same damn road
Towing this load

The mistakes I've made are comin' back to haunt me
Like a ghost from a grave always there to taunt me
You say its okay, you say you still want me
But you don't know where I've been
I'm no stranger to myself
I've got skeletons, I've got skeletons

The mistakes I've made are comin' back to haunt me
Like a ghost from a grave always there to taunt me
You say its okay, you say you still want me
But you don't know where I've been
I'm no stranger to myself
You say you don't know where I've been
I'm no stranger to myself
I've got skeletons, I've got skeletons
I've got skeletons yeah, I've got skeletons
