I tried to stay awake
waiting for your call,
but when it finally came Iâ€™d already gone to sleep.

Answering machine
had already picked up.
It was set for the third ring which had already rung as I woke up.

Now Iâ€™m racing for the phone but tangled in the sheets,
fell face flat on the floor,
and Iâ€™m spitefully cursing because Iâ€™m hearing in the next room youâ€™re angry I forgot you.
Iâ€™ve forgotten you again.
Picked up my old pen,
and scribbled out this note.
Within a weeks time youâ€™ll get my envelope and then youâ€™ll know

I was racing for the phone
but tangled in the sheets,
fell face flat on the floor,
and Iâ€™m spitefully cursing
because Iâ€™m hearing in the next room
youâ€™re angry I forgot you.
Iâ€™ve forgotten you again.

The danger is not in anger, oh no.
But apathy will squelch the strongest love
