My father died today
A lovely melody is fading
My memories will stay
For months he was waiting

For you dark brother of sleep
Limbs are crippled, pain can't be eased.
Decline and illness creep
Open doors for you, he is released

Is my life a castle built on sand?
Did I hold a liar's hand?
Walls of betrayal, roof of lies.
Oh I'm scared what if truth dies.

Whatever words will tell
Tales from heaven or from hell
They'll never change our past
What is true will always last.

His life lies in my hand
A story from an unknown dark land
Happened many years ago
In a town where silent winds blow.

Ashes to ashes he claims
Scattered pieces, nothing remains
But a fading melody
Some loving words in a diary

Is my life a castle built on sand?
Did I hold a liar's hand?
Walls of betrayal, roof of lies.
Oh I'm scared what if truth dies

Whatever words will tell
Tales from heaven or from hell
They'll never change our past
What is true will always last

This is our story
Lost souls -forever we cry

This is our story
For salvation we died.
