(Music and lyrics by Elisa Toffoli)

Nothing can shine and show completely when it's all covered in dust as much as time can burn the colors off my paper photographs every moment I treasure I can see and trust and everyone leaves a tear and a scar and a star on a map currently tracing in real time and whether I show it or not I can't say it's not me, I won't say it's not mine and no doubt I'm going to remember all the flames of the fire we've got no doubt I'll surely remember I don't think I'll need to recall now if I could, I wouldn't want to see this sadness falling in, I'd turn away 'n rise again to find in every single thing a new source of joy, something to rebuild a little courage in me, a little something to feel to add on a map currently tracing in real time, and whether I like or not

the fire we've got
I don't think I'll need to recall this love spills over nothing that I'll do but share cause' none of us will be forgotten and no one will be left over never never no doubt I'm going to remember the flames of this fire we've got these days, and it's still burning these days, pearl days
