"A Thousand Kisses"

I feel a thousand kisses, everywhere.
I feel a thousand kisses, everywhere.

I'm lying in the sand and close my eyes.
In my dreams, we are traveling through depths and heights.
There is music and a colorful carousel
With a coach pulled by two horses, surrounded by mysteries.
The music's rhythm is moving our bodies.

I feel a thousand kisses, everywhere.
That's too wonderful to bear,
To bear, to bear.
Come, let us move along!

We are lying in the grass in the middle of a glade.
The grass is glimmering in every color,
And it's so smooth that I believe to hover.
The rhythm of the wind moving the crowns of the trees,
This is the rhythm of our bodies.

I feel a thousand kisses, everywhere.
That's too wonderful to bear,
To bear, to bear.
Come, let us move along!

We are lying in the water, in the middle of a cave
Which is glimmering in blue and green, a little enclave.
And the water is so warm and smooth, I feel so safe.
The rhythm of the water, which is touching the cliffs,
Is like the rhythm of our bodies.

I feel a thousand kisses, everywhere.
That's too wonderful to bear,
To bear, to bear.
Come, let us move along!
