When I woke up that morning, it was a day,
A day like so many others.
I never thought to meet you when walking
Through this city where everything bothers.

I perceived you, and stopped, and closed my eyes.
I just learned to forget you forever.
I just said "Hello" and tried to be nice,
Then I thought: "Forever is never,
Forever is never".

Then I ran and I ran and I ran and I ran,
Never again want to feel like it began.
And I ran and I ran and I ran and I ran,
Never again want to kiss the last kiss, my man.

Then I ran and I ran and I ran and I ran,
Never again want to feel like it began.
And I ran and I ran and I ran and I ran,
Never again want to kiss the last kiss, my man.

I didn't turn around, didn't stop, barely felt,
Just hated the salty taste of my tears.
Didn't think or remember, it never was real,
Just hated this special fear of my fears.

But you were close, I didn't know what to say,
I turned around and pushed you away.
You held me tight, I could feel your tears
Dropping slowly on my face, bitter was their taste.

Then I ran and I ran and I ran and I ran,
Never again want to feel like it began.
And I ran and I ran and I ran and I ran,
Never again want to kiss the last kiss, my man.

Then I ran and I ran and I ran and I ran,
Never again want to feel like it began.
And I ran and I ran and I ran and I ran,
Never again want to kiss the last kiss, my man.

Then I ran and I ran and I ran and I ran,

Never again want to feel like it began.
And I ran and I ran and I ran and I ran,
Never again want to kiss the last kiss, my man.
