Opened up a box of you,
Piece of paper or two,
With my name written on it, and a question mark
Who is this girl that Iâ€™ve made?
â€™Cause Iâ€™ve been kept in the dark

And Iâ€™ve seen you once, Father
In the fear of your belts and leather,
And you were just about to tempter,
There was distance,
Youâ€™re my spout resistance
And I can't believe that you still donâ€™t know me, â€™Cause I am a mystery

So I separated all the things that I have hated,
With the victories Iâ€™ve won,
And the biggest one was you,
You donâ€™t know my street or the size of my feet or,
Or the time it took to grow,
â€™Cause Father these are things you should know,
These are things you should know,

Knocked the breath right out of you,
But whatâ€™s a brown-eyed girl to do?
When her future lies on chasing paper,
And all I get from you is; â€™Youâ€™re so clever" and "Iâ€™ll see you later.â€™"
And I just can't hide my frustration,
When thereâ€™s so much more you could have done,
Like given me hope and attention instead of ignore,
No I donâ€™t mind, no, I donâ€™t mind because he is just a boy,
Cause we are children,
We are merely children,
And he is just a boy,

So I separated all the things that I have hated,
With the victories Iâ€™ve won,
And the biggest one was you,
You donâ€™t know my street or the size of my feet or,
Or the time it took to grow,

Â'Cause these are things you should know
