We spent the hour on a random bar's balcony with beer and view
You don't ask anything about me, you don't offer much about you It's been a year, and I hear you're cool with everyone these days
I shouldn't let your disinterest phase me, but it's not that easy
We sit there and I watch you not care about anything Ten Feet Tall and Bullet Proof
And I am silently wailing against your iron-clad, bitter, bad attitude
I come and go now, my life isn't slowed down like it used to be,
When we laughed and you shared and you weren't trapped inside your Beloved and revered state of being unhappy.

You tell me to go but I won't You ask me to go but I won't You tell me please go but I won't
You are Ten Feet Tall and Bullet Proof
If your strength is measured in cupfuls, then I feel your cup runneth over,
Your sadness swirling in the beer by the gulfull,
And fear is being held by the throat But who am I to say I know who you've become?
I'm just stranded in my friendly boat trying to cross your nasty moat Filled with gators and craters smile haters

You ask me to go but I won't
You are Ten Feet Tall and Bullet Proof
When I go I'm still here; when I'm gone, I'll appear...Somehow
When I go I'm around; When I'm gone, I'll make sound...Somehow
When I go I'm still here; When I'm gone, I'll appear even when
You are Ten Feet Tall and Bullet Proof
Perhaps I should just lift my glass, clink your armour, say cheers to your mood,

Let you brood over unworthy "old" friends because it's time for me to go again,
I come and go now, my life isn't slowed down like it used to be
I only had this
