Flames, Wildfire
As far as the eye can see Purging inferno catastrophe waves, highwater at the places it shouldn't be sweeping whirlpool insanity

World downfall, the fury and the chaos within ambushment, attack from within the earth when the sky turns black and the nature's sounds so mute

the dead walk the earth's last round outnumbering the day
all light peels away
in the flickering sway of the sun's last ray

winds, tornado raging above all lands blowing storm out of hand soil, sands spreading across the nations disastrous dry desert plantations

World downfall, the fury and the chaos within

mute
the dead walk the earth's last round
outnumbering the day

when the rats flee off this sinking ship called earth the world stops turning as time dies
outnumbering the day
all the air blows cold as the damp mold covers more than only our old

World downfall, the fury and the chaos within
ambushment, attack from within the earth
outnumbering the day
