

The Blood Brothers

"Meet Me At The Waterfront After The Social"

Visit "Meet Me At The Waterfront After The Social" on MotoLyrics.com

do you recall when we were young?
we licked the summer's salty tongue.
do you remember in our youth?
we sought the sky's amphetamine truth.
(at the waterfront after the social) a carnie sold me two roses:
one that lisped one that hissed sugar foam and love song needles i slipped them through your fingers,
but they just crawled up both your arms and
whispered...
and that phosphorescent laugh drip dropped from your
lips...
they said "oh teen ruby fiend, open those thighs,
show us the urchin inside!"
your gown gangrened down your hips.
reached out towards the oyster ships.
i pulled you closer for a kiss but the roses paved my
lips
and made my mouth a grave filled with promises...
"i'll forget you when i'm famous baby... i'll forget you in five minutes from now..."
do you recall in our youth?
we sought the sky's amphetamine truth.
do you remember when we were young?
we licked the summer's salty tongue.

Visit The Blood Brothers page on MotoLyrics.com, to get more lyrics and videos.