And every soldier's face is burnt,
and it's a mask or it's a flash.
And their hands are turned to rifles now,
and they kill everything and anything they touch.

So watch the trees swaying in the breeze,
keeping beat to the butchery.

And every subway station's wrecked,
it shuts down and off.
And business men in a panic: "Here they come! Here
they come!"
And they collect power killing love.

So watch the bat,
a picnic death camp.
Keeping beat to the butchery.

So children come burn the skyscrapers
and the cities alive.
Come clean within you.
And the metronome clicks like new,
and the metronome clicks over our skulls.

And every single window pane is smashed,
and every compass smiling broken glass.
Here's a place where the soldiers came,
to rake up all that they could take.
So toss another bottle,
pull another pin.
Light up the sky in a butchery.

So children come burn the skyscrapers
and the cities alive.
Come clean within you.
And the metronome clicks like new,
and the metronome clicks over our skulls.

So children come burn the skyscrapers
and the cities alive.
Come clean within you.

So children come burn the skyscrapers
and the cities alive.
Come clean within you.
And the metronome clicks like new,
and the metronome clicks over our skulls.
