In this light the dust is visible
Golden glowing atmosphere
Even the air I breath is full of memories
Shades of others path my skin
And since I am alone, I wonder
Who on earth would ever know
If I slipped into the other side
Without making a sound without blinking an eye
without slowing down at all
I could jump the track

Still the wheels are turning
Landscapes echo in my mind
Flying past my windows
How could anyone fear this place?
And since I am alone, I wonder
Who on earth, would ever guess?
If I cross this fragile strand that binds
Without making a noise
Without skipping a beat
Without slowing down at all
I could jump the track
And what were specters now have faces
Casting light in darkened places
Those that I have loved are with me
Never gone, but ever drifting
Through the treads of my existence
Courses running, side by side
Paths entwining, realigning
Meeting, past the great divide
In the realm that phantoms hide
Sanctified, occupied
And since I am alone, I wonder
Who on earth, would ever care?
If I slipped away before my time
Without saying a word
Without praying to god
Without slowing down at all
I could jump the track
I could jump the track
I could jump
