Consumption of Love
Destruction of Home
You broke their legs before they could walk
You broke them down
You broke them
Drunkard married to addiction
Your scars break
The barriers of death
And touch the generations
After you
You breed death and dishonor
I never knew you
I knew the man you killed
A broken man in
The midst of his life
Robbed of all his happiness
Scars from the past
Deepen with no repair
Although his was taken in youth
My father still gave me the world
In the likeness of Christ
A testimony to the man you could have been
