Carving your cryptic
lies in my back,
a friendship gets
torn at the seams.
The north winds blow,
turning summer's rains
into December's ice.
Like the two seasons,
you changed to what she wanted,
what he wanted.
Your face washed away
with every choice you made, the bridge starts to burn and the embers embrace your soiled desires. Reaching for your hand as the water fills your lungs.
I tried to pull you to the shore but you just turned away.
Swimming towards the sirens,
you couldn't refuse their soft voices.

Now faced with nothing left,
you sink to the ocean's floor.
May death come quick and grant me a blackened salvation.
Serpents slither under your skin injecting venom into your veins, your pulse begins to weaken.
can you live with your self?
I stand here staring at what remains of your life.
This hopeless feeling is overwhelming.
Nothing can ever be the same.
Nothing will ever be the same.
The chapter ends with nothing but deceit.
You no longer exist to me.
