My home,
my fairytale world's been overthrown
The world outside has bastardized what I had thought I'd known We're nothing more than wild animals deep in every living soul

There is war
from the mountains to the shore
There is war
in the streets and corridors
There is war in every single family
There is war
in you and me

All my life,
I thought the war was under different skys
but there's no corner you can't hear the battle cries Which is why
it's not longer safe to walk my streets at night
We just don't treat each other right

There is war
from the mountain to the shore
There is war
in the streets and corridors
There is war
in every single family
There is war
in you and me

Cities will burn
but you'll never learn your only concerned with how I can I win?
How can I score?
In this war

There is war
from the mountains to the shore
There is war

in the streets and corridors
There is war
in every single family
There is war
inside of me
