"She Will Have Her Way"

I might be old but I'm someone new, she said I'm so sore, that I could cry, always In the night lay your tired arms
She will have her way
Somehow I will still believe her It's the life I've been frightened of she said deathly silence and especially the dark feels like I am heavy and my spirit has died
She will have her way

somehow I will still believe her
She will have her way
one day I will come back still no end in sight though I travel far and wide a dying man is doing time thinker, soldier terrified and she will have her way
somehow I will still believe her
She will have her way
One day I will come back
