"Of Malice And Majesty"

Through the looking glass, I watched in silence as we crumbled
Like ashes in a breeze, fall apart Bone and flesh, reduced to dust and lies before me Within this moment I knew, that I had changed forever Unholy passion of man's great loss, was offered to us this day
As our anguish poured like rain, observant to my decay May the torment I live through now, echo through eternity Sing it's song inside my mind and descend into memory
I remember the sound that their bodies made, as these gods of war were Split in two before my eyes and I, can't save them all or speak of peace
The words that were ripped from my mouth, echo blind in the moonlit sky
As though all the phrases know no bounds, no confines Malice consuming, though my hands are shaking I slay them all with my hands Just to put my soul at ease and rest Through the violence I have seen, I've found a new understanding of How easily we can be broken
Through all these years, I've remained so silent
When I'm not strong enough to run through the fire
Where the darkness lives on, in every moment here They're taking my hand, I'll scream it out forever in death decide
Through all these years, I've remained so silent
When I'm not strong enough to run through the fire
This is not compassion I seek, words that become the essence of the anger I felt Won't fade with time and decide, when life has ceased to set me free I remain trapped inside the body of a broken man and only here will waste away With nothing but my memories to guide Through the darkness of my mind, will I find the answers to Shine new light on my shattered world and leave the earth behind

And only I know why
The pain that lasts lifetimes Will I be saved? Set free from life?
