Longing to sail on
Through the night to the stars
On until sunrise
Where the moon hides her tears
All through the years

If I could see the world
Through someone else's eyes
If I could see through you
Would I cast you to one side

And if you gave it all
Would I throw it all away
Like the leaves in autumn winds

From the window in the kitchen
To the fireside by the chair
Sat in familiar surroundings
Warm night air

Under the bridges that were burning
Before we reached the other side
All the feelings I remember, I cannot hide
Not for want of trying

And if you held me here
Would the moment fade away
Into obscurity like the night
Becomes the day

For all the broken promises
Tell me where do I begin
To throw my caution to the wind

From the window in the kitchen
To the fireside by the chair
Sat in familiar surroundings
Warm night air

Under the bridges that were burning
Before we reached the other side
All the feelings I remember, I cannot hide

Not for want of trying

From the window in the kitchen
To the fireside by the chair
Sat in familiar surroundings
Warm night air

Under the bridges that were burning
Before we reached the other side
All the feelings I remember, I cannot hide
Not for want of trying

Longing to sail on
Through the night to the stars
On until sunrise
Where the moon hides her tears

Longing to sail on
Through the night to the stars
On until sunrise
Where the moon hides her tears

Longing to sail on
Through the night to the stars
On until sunrise
Where the moon hides her tears

All through the years
All through the years
All through the years
