Always Back To You-Eric Bogle Well they say the heart's a lonely hunter, always searching for a home That in every soul there is hunger, to find the place where it belongs
I came to this land as a stranger, year by year the deep love grew And that's why every road I travel leads always back to you For I have heard the Humpback's singing, the ocean filling with the song I've heard the Bell Bird's chimes come ringing through the misty forest dawn
And I have seen the Braulga's dancing on Dreamtime land at Kakadu
And that's why every road I travel leads always back to you And I've slept in my swag out in the desert, been humbled by infinity
As the moon and the stars in glittering concert, turned desert sand to silver seal felt my heart break with the beauty as a red sun set on Ularu
And that's why every road I travel leads always back to you
And I drank with my friends in Boshan City, laughed and sang all through the night
Their friendship is a flame that warms me, their love and care a guiding light It's a hard and lonely journey without friends to help you through
And that's why every road I travel leads always back to you
Oh, they say the heart's a lonely hunter, always searching for a home
That in every soul there is hunger, to find the place where it belongs I came to this land as a stranger, year by year the deep love grew
And that's why every road I travel leads always back to you
And that's why every road I travel leads always home to you
