It wasn't me the guy who talked his head off last night
Can't you see? I'll never fit into your shoe size Or through that door where you cast your aspirations to the drunken wind
To be abhorred is better than me being just a friend

You don't want to know I was thinking
We could see how far this could go before
I screw it up again
And on my way I forgot to lock that creaky back door That's in the way of letting in the ocean of your thoughts
You'll find me disappointed because I'm numb within You wanted more but I just let you out to let you in

You don't want to know I was thinking
We could see how far this could go
I'm sorry to waste your precious time
I was thinkin' we could see how far this'd climb

Because you really don't and you really can't see I've got this problem that revolves around me, me, and me
I'm better away as a web in your mind
Fading on out through the rust and the time.
