Well the morning was wrapped in a blanket of clouds.
I've been out driving since a quarter of two.
My body's aching, my feelings are numb.
From the bittersweet memory that's tangled in you.
The bittersweet memory all tangled in you.

There's cars that are cruising with nowhere to go.
And the rain in the streets makes them shine good as new.
Wish I could ride right out of this town,
And away from the memory that's tangled in you.
The bittersweet memory all tangled in you.

There's friends I go out with, friends that I know.

They leave the feels like there's nothing to do.
My best friend just packed up and left with her lover.
Left me alone with the memory of you.
Bittersweet memory all tangled in you.

So I'm packing my things and I'm moving back home.
This town ain't enough to cripple my soul.
Saying goodbye should be easy to do.
But the bittersweet memory is tangled in you.
A bittersweet memory's all tangled in you.

Well the morning was wrapped in a blanket of clouds.
I've been out driving since a quarter of two.
