Once upon a time in the land of seven seas
In north covered by ice an old poet lived
During wars and tragedies in his castle he sat
Suffering and pain he wanted to forget

They covered his eyes and told him he was blind
In search for something more faith was nowhere left to find
Slowly he was dying cause his soul was dying for more
He was only tryin' not to be ignored

He died alone, no one was there
He felt the pain but there was no one to share
He died alone, no one was there

Sitting on his chair he couldn't find the words to write
The moon was shining on his desk but the words weren't in his sight
He couldn't breathe, his hands were just as numb
His heart has stopped and his eyes turned to black

He died alone, no one was there
He died alone, no one was there
