Lombard street a car flips over
People gather
There are flashing lights
The driver cries on someone's shoulder
Is his friend alright?

Five blocks down a groom leans closer
As he starts to kiss his wife
She's so happy that he chose her
And it's in her eyes
The best day of her life

As the world keeps turning
I know that you're gone
And I'm finally learning
How I was wrong

And it feels so different
Without you I'm lost in it all

Jamie's finally getting sober
The social worker said she's doing fine
Reading letters her kids wrote her
She hasn't seen them in the longest time

It's hard to understand
If there's a bigger plan
When you've got nowhere to go

But the world keeps turning
I know that you're gone
And I'm finally learning
How I was wrong

And it feels so different
Without you I'm lost in it all

Sometimes I stumble and fall
Sometimes I'm left feeling small

You were too good for me

I was too blind to see
That everything was my fault

As the world keeps turning
I know that you're gone
And I'm finally learning
How to be strong

And it feels so different
Without you I'm lost in it all
