so here we are again standing off with time standing face to face i'm staring in your eyes do i know you this town is getting old old like friends faces i don't want you to fade away like everything in my life weigh me down and hold me back did i fail you some how occasionally i looked away forcing things to change this time i'm letting go the fear that's wrapped around out throats fighting back these tears where did the years go so many careless days you can count them all by the lines on his face
