When I wake up
from a night of dreams
I want to see you lying next to me
With everything inside of me I want to show the man that I can be When the opportunity arrives in the morning when I awake the first thing I want to see in your face

They spread the distance between us and the miles are just numbers counting down till they reach the end they are few and far between

And all my hopes and dreams are now on the back porch for their significance isn't what it was before was before They spread the distance between us and the miles are just numbers counting down to raise the bar of standards and to think everything through there's a light at the end of the tunnel and it just so happens to be you

To say this is built on faith to say the worries are of the past there's a light at the end
and it just so happens to be you it happens to be you it happens to be....
you're the difference

from a night of dreams
