Tell me how you sleep without me, lying next to you Breathing in your skin, and this forbidden fruit Never tasted so good to me and you

Juliet . . . I kneel beside your window sill

Tell me bright eyes your smile makes me realize that you're what makes me breath

So princess where's your prince? He's waiting patiently Because this hole in his heart is not filled without thoughts of you and me

So grant me the strength to carry on with these pictures and letters and late night calls

Juliet . . . I kneel beside your window sill

Tell me bright eyes your smile makes me realize that
you're what makes me breath

Tell me how you sleep without me
