You take the name of a man you hardly know
And then you grow up and that name has to go
Married with kids and they don't want to know
About the dreams you had to let go

You're still waiting for a knight in shining armor
To steal you against your will
And while you're waiting and doing no harm
You know there's plenty of time to kill

And when you claim you wouldn't change a day
It makes me wonder where I went astray
Happy with things that leave me tired
We're as unlike as frost and fire, oh

And now yourself you start to see in me
Pictures of things which you could've been Torches I find I am bearing for you
When you know you could've carried them too

We give up so easily
What little they leave us to lose
And if I didn't have the fire to struggle
I could freeze in your shoes

When I say I couldn't live that way
You must wonder where I went astray
Happy with things that leave me tired
We're as unlike as frost and fire, oh

When I say I couldn't live that way
You must wonder where I went astray
Happy with things that leave me tired
We're as unlike as frost and fire, oh
