[chorus]x2

I sign his space's with time existant blare
I hold the mic like a memory

[Deacon the Villan]

There was a time when I couldnt find energy
The only person that was filln' me was Mrs. Hennesey Ahh,Its like life was pinnin' me down
I used to gout on the town and get instantly clowend
You aint gonna be a rapper, you not a factor
You just a kentucky boy, get yourself a tractor
Chasing out the bogus dreams that you never acheive Thats when the liquer and weed became a need Self-esteem was about as low as ??
Asperations were about as big as Mertyl Ercl's titties
Then as soon as I started geeting some pride
My sister high, drugged, plain and died on ile 65
In a family full of pride, house full of tears
Spent many years with a blood stream of beers
Heart full of fears all ??, no cheers
Till the rythem in my ears make my mind clear

[Chorus]x2

[Dj Kno]

Aiiyo, I hold the microphone enclosed in my palm
And go beyond the flows exposed in my songs
Cant grow fond of past memories
Cos negetivity leeds the way to live with vast energy
Offended by the mental imagery
And suggest livin' in poverty was really meant for me paternal tendancies towards chemical dependancies had me thinking that all my enemies work into me
And I cant begin to see how to control the flash backs
And progress past, all my style of dress got me laughed at Thought I was passed at
But it attemp's to reoccur when I dont proceive wat I feel I deserve
being slurred by those not livin' in my position,

My thoughts tend to glisten, Just like I'm kinda pissn'
And when I thought id risin', life freeze's the frame
So I hold the mic like a memory to ease th pain.

[Chorus]x2

[Kory Calico]

I sit back on the flip, on the wild paths in my life
Only pain and heartache can feel my paths on the right
You know wat blasphemys like, cursing the god
Cause you aint got shit it hurts and its hard
Hell at times I stepped it up to only stumble
Was forced to play tarzan in this concrete jungle
Most of my life's a daze got me forever lighting haze Trying to forget the times, where I barely ate twice a day
For, alone and helpless, so when I only felt the shame sharing a twin bed in a homeless shelter
Few friends even then, most hommies is fake
Feel like a prisoner in my home pencil my only escape
I went from the block with my fam, to collage exams
But the pressures still there
Dog, I'm still scared
But I know it will all be right in the end
As long as I can focus my fears and channel my life through my pen
