She starts her day with coffee and a smoke
She puts in her time from 9 to 5
From head to toe she's covered in tattoos
Makes me wonder what she's hiding from

And no one sees the tears she hides
When the lights go down and she's left to her demise
And no one knows what's in her head
Toy shop girl, why are you so sad?

She spends her day with a plastic smile
She passes the hours dreaming 'bout better days
In her diary she writes, "I can't take it anymore"
Makes me wonder what could be so bad
And no one sees the tears she hides
When the lights go down and she's left to her demise
And no one knows what's in her head
Toy shop girl, why are you so sad?

She pulls the razor across skin to feel the pain
She wonders if she'll ever feel again
Why is she so sad?

And no one sees the tears she hides
When the lights go down and she's left to her demise
And no one knows what's in her head
Toy shop girl, why are you so sad?
