The morning broke my fall
As I realised you'd left no word
Just last night's cigarette burns
I'm in another world, one in which
You word doesn't mean a thing
And your promises stink
Promises don't mean a thing

Silently, we move through the night
At speed, setting alight what once was freed
Setting alight our dreams

With the force of rejection at my door
I waited all night
I wondered where you'd gone
And I've never ever known

You read me like a book
That fits us like a novel about the greatest pair
I've no regrets, except that I believed
You might have been the one
Then you never came home
Never came home

Silently, we move through the night
At speed, setting alight what once was freed
Setting alight our dreams

With the force of rejection at my door
I waited all night
I wondered where had you gone
With the force of rejection at my door
I waited all night
I wondered where had you gone
And I've never
I have never known

Witnesses will be called
If these walls could tell them all
I saved my love
For you to rain on

Eyes never lie
Eyes never lie
Your eyes never lie

Silently, move through the night
At speed, setting alight what once was freed
Setting alight our dreams
With the force of rejection at my door
I waited all night
I wondered where had you gone
With the force of rejection at my door
I waited all night
I wondered where had you gone
And I've never, I have never known
