When you decided you wanted to leave me
I didn't say much
Just treated you as you were free

So many times I wanted to pull back
Intense begging was of no use
Just treated it as loneliness

Because I can understand
Her kindness was a kind of release for you
Just honestly tell me
Who do you love the most?

Actually you really love her
As my punishment
Saying you didn't think of her was pitying me, right?

I already don't have any excuses
I can only let go
I don't dare demand you to say you love me

Actually you really love her
Is she really gentle?
Actually you really miss her
Just say it

I already don't want to say too much
I cover my ears
Don't want to hear you say again that you really love her
