Hear me my beloved; I beckon thee through waves of dream

And in mine ears a voice whispers oceans of light
And in thine eyes alone begins this journey of mine Is this love? Thou art love; thou art truth

Thou art a vision resplendent and I am born with recognition

For I have known thee a thousand years yet never known thee before

When thy radiance spoke my name I was a king restored

And my kingdom pales in the gloriousness of thee
And my fortunes mask an emptiness filled only by this Where our world exists beyond this brilliant dream
I shall find thee, thou art the answer

I will find thee, thou art the light

Yet I am human and thy light dims with consciousness

I am man and my love shall dim in thy conquest

I am passionately human and I shall close my eyes to thee

For truth proves me mortal to be

Yes, this is love and I must put my heart to sleep

For this is love; true love dims in human's keep

And I am damned

Hear me my beloved I beckon thee through waves of

And in thine ears my voice whispers oceans of light
And in mine eyes alone begins this journey of thine

Hear me my beloved I have patiently awaited thee

For I remain confined within the realm of sleep

And in thy dreams I have long hoped thou wouldst see me

Hear me my beloved I beckon thee through waves of

And my voice shall resurrect the deity

And this vision shall awaken thee as thou ought to be

For this is love
